

Three Accomplishments

The first accomplishment that I think is important to me is that of earning my Eagle award in scouting. Being in the scouting program has helped me to learn to survive and be prepared for life. I also learned the best ways to lead people and be apart of a group of people.

In the scouting program there is a lot of opportunity to learn life skills and focus on learning when you grow up as a teenager. Some of the essential things that I have learned are to be prepared for any situation that will come up. We go hiking many of time and each time I have learned some type of lessons. For example I went on a 50 mile canoe trip and most certainly I had brought things on that trip that I learned I could have left behind. By these experiences I can better be prepared and organized for whatever I am doing.

The second skill that I learn is to be a good leader and to work in groups of people. Throughout scouting I was part of a group and there would be activities and things that we would have to plan for. I was awesome to work together on serving our community and helping each other to have fun on our activities. I learn a fundamental principle of leadership. When I in charge of activities and events that we did I was in charge of preparing and putting together the activities. One of the culminating leadership opportunities was to put together my final eagle project. I coordinated and planned for a project that benefited the community. This is why I view scouting as a great accomplishment that I have done.

My second accomplishment is Going through school and having experience in work to earn money. It is often said that we face our biggest challenges when we have to prove ourselves. This has been a learning experience both in work and school.

Through my years growing up I have been able to work over the summers and gain experience. My first job opportunity was to work at a person's house to do yard work. He had many about 4-5 acres and I along with my brothers help to keep his place clean and looking good. Because me and my two other brothers did such a good job there was another guy that wanted us to work at his property. I have been able to work there for a good summer and increase my working skills out in the yard. I learn to be proficient and reliable in the work that I do. I also learned perseverance because some of the work would be physically strenuous. The latest opportunity I have had with working is to work at a party rental place. I have learned how a small business in ran and with it I was responsible for delivering rental stuff and putting up big tents. Through all these experiences I was able to grow by becoming reliable and being a good worker for those that I worked for.

I know that school has also been a great accomplishment to me. I had gone through high school with good grades and was involved in sport and activities. As a result I was able to get accepted into Brigham Young University Idaho with a scholarship. Now that I am in College I will be able to get a better job in the world and graduating from college will become a great accomplishment to me.

The last accomplishment is going on a Mission. I have my papers and I should get them soon. Even though I have not gone yet I view this as an accomplishment that will be with me forever. It will give me an opportunity to become better at communicating with people and being organized with the notes and studying that I will do. This will also help me to prepare for work after college. By going on a mission I will have learned to get up every day and make the most of it. This is what my last Accomplishment that I view important.
